GOT HIS DESERTS.

Manuel Phillips Will Not Drive a Hack For Some Time.

Manuel Phillips, the hackdriver, was fined $100 and costs and his hack license revoked, by Judge Wilcox Saturday morning for aiding the soliciting of young girls for immoral purposes. The Judge felt convinced, he said, that Manuel was guilty on the testimony of the two native girls, and also in the Kakaako robbery case last Sunday night. The one for whom Manuel solicited was one Williams, the cook of the bark "Mohican."

When the case was finished, the two girls walked out of the courtroom first, followed closely by Williams, who grabbed one of them, the arm and threatening her for have given such damaging testimony against Phillips. The girl broke away from him, and Williams caught her again on the second landing just as the deputy Sheriff and Officer Hanrahan reached the scene. The trouble had been heard by the Judge and an investigation ordered. Williams was brought back before the Judge, and another set of lies ensued. His Honor caught the matter short by sending Williams to jail for twenty-four hours for contempt of court. He was released at noon yesterday.
